

ŠETNJA

Serbian

PRONUNCIATION: SHET-nyah

TRANSLATION: Walking or strolling

SOURCE: Dick Oakes learned this dance from Dick Crum who learned it in 1954 from Miodrag Vuković, a folk dancer from Beograd (Belgrade), and subsequently taught it to folk dancers in the United States from 1958 on. Elsie Dunin presented it at the 1968 Workshop for Teachers and Leaders. Bora Gajicki presented variations on the theme of Šetnja in 1974 and 1985.

BACKGROUND: Dick Crum, noted Balkan dance researcher, observed Šetnja being danced at many gatherings in Šumadija, the great heartland of Serbia that extends southeast of Belgrade. The area is heavily covered with forests, hence the name (from šuma or "forest"). In Šumadija, Šetnja is a time-honored traditional dance with a definite place in the day's activities. When a young man arrives at the field or churchyard where a festivity is taking place, he seeks out one of the many Gypsy musicians who have come to town for the day, pays him a certain amount of money to play for him, then proceeds to gather his friends one by one on his left. The dance they usually do is Šetnja, and they meander about the entire dancing area gathering up people. When a large enough open circle is formed, the musicians play faster and the dance ends. Šetnja is generally followed by the dance U Šest Koraka to a tune such as "Moravac."
